Dear All,

One cycle ends and a new one begins! We were extremely fortunate to be able to carry out a "tour of Europe" during almost a year and a half in 10 cities, which is coming to an end very soon in Brussels. We have been close to 80 people to be engaged in this adventure, a number that barely represents the amount of talent invested, the hours of preparation and dedicated realization, the great variety of dialogue and debate within our little... Beit!

And a new cycle begins, with an even more powerful desire to change the world by... education. It sounds simple and maybe it is, as we see the proof every day through the actions that young people themselves are developing and undertaking toward today's world challenges.
This echoes also the motivation and stamina that we encountered when working with teachers and students for the launching of the European Perspectives Workshops this past academic year. Indeed, this new proposal which will benefit from our experience of last year, will now be even better fitted to empower young citizens to design and take actions.
That’s why I wish us all a happy “Rentrée”, full of projects and achievements!

Un nouveau site pour le projet ! / A brand new website for the project

The upcoming projects!
The academic year 2019-2020 has just started and it is filled with plenty of interesting and meaningful projects across a wide range of cities in Europe. This year, three new European cities will be added to the year schedule and will host projects, which include Madrid, Nantes and Iasi. So, in total, 13 projects are scheduled throughout the academic year in 11 different cities, which include Skopje, Ixelles, Paris, Brussels, Madrid, Iasi, Marseilles, Sofia, Nantes, Nice and Bucharest. The projects will offer platforms of encounter and sharing among youth of different backgrounds that would not have the chance to meet in other circumstances. In addition, they will provide a space of dialogue, debate and exchange of points of view on contemporary issues and an opportunity to rediscover the urban heritage and stress its social value. Following its previous implementation in pilot mode, 5 European Perspectives Workshops (EPW) are planned throughout the year with a more strengthened and elaborated role. For instance, the EPW will not only be enriched by its previous experience and by new partners in each city, but also by connecting cities that didn’t collaborate before, such as Madrid-Brussels and Paris-Iasi, offering new interesting insights and exchanges among youth. A part from all the projects, a new innovative event has been scheduled in November in Brussels, which is the European Closure Event, gathering local-team members, colleagues, collaborators and the project’s friends. The event is an occasion to meet, reflect on what has been achieved by the project and to brainstorm about The Beit’s project’s next steps, and is scheduled with conferences, round-tables discussions and seminars, among others. The academic year looks overall promising, filled with exciting and encouraging projects that guarantee to create interesting exchanges and discussions, to bring new innovative citizen actions and to form beautiful encounters. We are really excited and looking forward to it!
